Frozen body of woman found in car trunk

WOODSTOCK, Ill. (AP) — A California woman who apparently ran out of gas on a lonely road near McHenry may have climbed into the trunk of her car and then subsequently died of exposure Nov. 26, McHenry County authorities said.

They speculated that a 3-inch snowfall jammed shut the trunk lid after Betty Ann Pleasant, 24, of Sacramento, Calif., a former telephone operator, apparently climbed inside because she was believed afraid to remain sitting in her auto.

Her body was found Thursday night in the trunk of her car, which had been impounded after it was found abandoned Dec. 2 along a seldom-traveled road.

An autopsy was scheduled today to determine the cause of death. The examination was delayed because of the frozen condition of the woman's body, authorities said.

The body of the 5-2 inch, 95-pound woman, was found lying on her right side in the trunk. "There were no apparent marks of violence nor any signs of a struggle, either in the trunk or in the car," said McHenry County Sheriff Arthur Tyrrell on Friday.

Lt. George Hendle said a witness told of seeing the woman Nov. 26 on River Road east of the Fox River where the car later was found. He told authorities she was standing by the open trunk of the car, and that she took something out of the trunk and put it in the front seat.

Authorities believe it was a garment bag found later inside the car. Hendle said the gas tank of the car was empty and the woman had the keys to the car in her purse, also found inside the trunk. He said she was carrying only $3.

The woman left California Nov. 19 with only $100, Hendle said investigation showed. Deputies found a $15 towing bill from a Utah company which was called when she ran off the road and became stuck.

Hendle said a rope was found tied inside the trunk lid, apparently so that she could tie it shut and leave a small space for air and allow her to reopen the trunk. But, Hendle said, about 3 inches of snow fell that night and may have pushed the lid closed.

A license plate check of the car upon its discovery showed the car was not stolen, and though the woman's sister, Peggy Lew of Sacramento, reported her sister missing Jan. 7, it did not come to nationwide attention.

A boyfriend of the woman, Willie Adside of Chicago, whom she was supposed to meet in Chicago, reported her missing to Chicago police Jan. 25.

Authorities finally opened the trunk after the owner of the lot where the car was impounded became curious over clothing left inside the auto.

Aftershocks continue to jar Guatemala

GUATEMALA CITY, Guatemala (AP) — Hundreds of aftershocks kept earthquake-devastated Guatemala in turmoil today, with hundreds of new victims increasing the official death toll to 7,375.

Unofficial estimates ranged up to twice that number dead, 40,000 injured and 200,000 homeless.

Reports from the countryside brought in by mules and bicycle messengers told of giant landslides, fallen bridges and whole communities leveled by the shaking earth.

Two sharp aftershocks Friday afternoon caused widespread panic among the country's 6 million people already dazed by the earthquake that smashed into southern Mexico and most of Central America before dawn Wednesday.

President Kjell Eugenio Laugerud estimated more than one out of 10 buildings was damaged in the country. The majority of them are built of low-cost bricks of dried mud and straw that have been used for centuries in Latin America.

Guatemala was critically short of food, medicines, doctors, hospitals and drinking water. Broken sewage pipes flooded many communities. Electric power, communications and other utilities damaged by the earthquake continued to be erratic.

In some communities, starved survivors were reported eating rats and whatever else they could catch.

Fearing widespread epidemics, Laugerud on Friday night ordered mass vaccinations and the immediate burial of the dead in common graves.

Hornsby decision in Kagay murder trial on Tuesday

By LENNY INGRASSIA
Circuit Judge Thomas E. Hornsby will render his verdict in the murder trial of 14-year-old Scott Kagay at 9 a.m. Tuesday.

The announcement came Friday at the conclusion of the four-day trial following final arguments by State's Atty. Patrick E. Ward and Kagay's lawyer, Public Defender William J. Sturgeon.

The proceedings were closed to the public, as are all juvenile cases, in compliance with the Juvenile Court Act. However, members of the news media are exempted from the act.

Kagay is accused of shooting Harold Smith, 64, Amboy, while the two were target shooting in an apple orchard across from the victims' home on Aug. 11.

The key issue centers on the boys' sanity at the moment he admitted pulling the trigger of a .22-caliber rifle. The two were 40 feet apart at the time the shot was fired.

Sturgeon reviewed testimony of his main defense witness, Rockford psychiatrist J. G. Graybill, who declared the boy was suffering from acute paranoid schizophrenia. "Your honor, isn't there at least a reasonable doubt here," the lawyer asserted, referring to a report from Dr. Werner Tuteur, the state-appointed psychiatrist who termed psychiatry "an inexact science."

Graybill testified the boy's mental health was in a remissive stage. "He (Kagay) said it came upon him and he pulled the trigger."

Tuteur testified such action is not consistent with schizophrenia. He said a person does not go in and out of episodes quickly, "it takes days or weeks." He added if Kagay was suffering from a paranoid-schizophrenic episode on Aug. 11 he would have detected it in his examination of the boy or Nov. 3.

Defense testimony attempted to show the boy's mental attitude lapsed into an acute stage at the time of the shooting and the feeling went away as Kagay was riding home on his bicycle.

Ward described the termed "strange behavior" of the boy following the shooting as normal behavior "for a person who kills, robs and then escapes."

The day after the murder Kagay led sheriff's deputies to a cornfield where he had hidden the victims' wallet containing $273.

Sturgeon pointed to Scott's history of mental illness preceding the shooting. The boy underwent psychiatric examination in February and March at two Rockford hospitals.

Graybill and Tuteur found Kagay competent to stand trial.

Scott was accompanied in court by his parents, Donald and Janice Kagay, former Amboy residents now living in Geneseo. The boy is being held in the Rockford Juvenile Detention Center until Tuesday. He faces detention in the Department of Corrections if found guilty of the crime.

Writers express disgust over Kleindienst portrait

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some people got plenty mad when a portrait of former Atty. Gen. Richard G. Kleindienst, a convicted criminal, was hung in the Justice Department. They're writing angry letters about it.

"This is tantamount to putting Al Capone's portrait in the police department," protested an Illinois man, one of 16 writers who denounced the action in letters to Atty. Gen. Edward H. Levi.

"Disgusting and inexcusable," declared a Missouri man.

"A disgraceful blight on our national system of justice" was the message from a Californian.

The trickle of letters, all unfavorable, since the portrait-hanging ceremony Jan. 23 may be no real measure of public sentiment. Still, a department spokesman said only two other portrait-hangings have provoked any letters at all.

The four to six previous letters dealt with the contemporary style of the other two paintings, not with the propriety of hanging them.

The Kleindienst portrait provoked a Minnesota man to exclaim: "How can the American people have faith in a Department of Justice which harbors, protects and finally honors men who abuse their public trust?"

Kleindienst, now a private lawyer in Washington, pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor charge of failing to testify fully to the Senate Judiciary Committee during his confirmation hearings when he denied there was White House pressure to drop an antitrust suit against the International Telephone & Telegraph Corp. He was given a suspended sentence of one month in prison and a $100 fine.

"I realize we cannot change the fact that he was once attorney general," wrote a Florida man, "but to now pay him tribute is an outrage."

The letters are funneled to the department's public information office where Director Robert Havel responds with a form letter. A reporter was allowed to read the letters on condition that the writers' names not be published. All the letters were signed.

The form letter reply from the Justice Department notes that the tradition of hanging the portraits of attorneys general in the department corridors began in 1794.

"There is no provision which would bar or prohibit a request by a former attorney general to have his picture painted and hung," Havel writes.

A New York woman wrote to ask "if my tax dollars went to pay for that portrait." The answer is yes.

Sproul boy still in poor condition

Timothy Sproul, 6-year-old son of Gerald and Patricia Sproul, 1310 Ann Ave., is reported in poor condition this morning at Rockford Memorial Hospital with injuries he received Thursday in a fall at South Central School.

The boy was transferred to the Rockford hospital from KSB Hospital with head, arm and leg injuries.

Sproul, a first grade student, fell over a railing between two flights of steps at the school while on the way to recess. The boy is a transfer student from Washington School.

Crash kills 7 U.S. airmen

MADRID, Spain (AP) — A U.S. Air Force cargo plane crashed shortly before landing at Torrejon Air Base outside Madrid on Friday, killing all seven U.S. Air Force men aboard, the Spanish Air Ministry said today.

The ministry erroneously reported earlier that eight Air Force men were aboard the plane, a C135.

Nixons will go to Red China

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (AP) — Former President Richard M. Nixon and his wife will visit China, scene of his greatest diplomatic triumph as president, at the repeated invitation of Chinese leaders. The visit is scheduled to begin Feb. 21, the fourth anniversary of the Nixons' first trip to China.

The Chinese will send a plane to California for the former president and all other costs of the trip will be borne by Nixon, a Nixon spokesman said. Nixon had declined earlier Chinese invitations because of poor health.

American visitors to China have reported that the Chinese speak fondly of Nixon and ask that greetings be conveyed to him.

Sources close to Nixon also said he refused a 1975 invitation so as not to conflict with President Ford's journey to China.

White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen stressed that Nixon would be traveling "as a private citizen" and the trip was "not expected to have any impact on diplomatic relations" or on domestic issues.

"There is no significance attached by the White House to the invitation," Nessen said.

President Ford's only advance knowledge of the trip came in a telephone conversation with Nixon and a visit

Thursday by the head of the Chinese liaison office in Washington who delivered the text of the official announcement made in Peking.

Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger had known of the plans, but not the exact date, since he visited San Clemente last Monday, the Los Angeles Times reported.

After the official announcement, Kissinger said:

"President Nixon has the historic achievement of having been the president who opened up relations with China and his visit as a private citizen will symbolize that relationship, which we expect to grow between our two countries."

When David and Julie Eisenhower visited China in December, Chairman Mao Tse-tung not only invited her father back to China but said he would be on hand to greet him, according to Nixon family sources.

The trip was arranged by the Nixon family and the Chinese government without the participation of American officials, it was learned.

The Nixon spokesman said the Chinese will provide Nixon with a medical team and a supply of his type of blood during the trip.

Nixon suffered a near-fatal attack of phlebitis after leaving office.

Alan Dixon lists his net worth as $411,000

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — State Treasurer Alan J. Dixon says his current net worth is more than $411,000.

Dixon issued a financial statement Friday listing assets of $411,038.74 and no liabilities.

Among the assets listed included more than $200,000 in bank accounts, savings certificates and other short-term investments, $80,000 in real estate, $63,000 in stocks and bonds, a $50,000 interest in a travel agency and $15,000 worth of automobiles, furniture, jewelry and personal wearing apparel.

Dixon, 48, who is seeking the Democratic nomination for secretary of state in the March 16 primary election, has served as treasurer since 1970. He served more than 20 years in the state legislature after beginning his public career at age 21 as a police magistrate in Belleville.

He said he would make public his 1975 state and federal income tax returns as soon as they were completed.

Dixon's opponent in the primary election, state Sen. Vince Demuzio of Carlinville, recently issued a financial statement listing his net worth as $42,000. His principal asset was a $45,000 home with a $21,700 mortgage.

Sterling state police office won't close, says Shapiro

SPRINGFIELD—State Sen. David C. Shapiro, R-Amboy, today reassured residents of Whiteside, Lee, Carroll and Ogle Counties that the Illinois State Police have no intention of closing their Sterling district office.

A Washington, D.C., consulting firm recommended realigning state police districts to increase efficiency and to reflect improvements in radio communications. The firm's plan suggested closing the District 1 office in Sterling.

Shapiro said he has been assured by Illinois State Police Supt. Dwight E. Pitman that redistricting would occur only in Cook County.

"If the Sterling office was closed, a number of civilians employed as clerks, radio operators and maintenance people would lose their jobs," Shapiro stated. "A number of state troopers currently living in the Sterling area would be forced to move elsewhere."

"Most of the people living in this area were primarily concerned about a possible increase in the time needed for state troopers to respond to calls for help. More time is needed to get to this area from Rockford, Rock Island or La Salle than is required from Sterling."

"I am relieved to know that these fears are groundless and the Sterling office will not be closed."

'Hot' ideas to cut rising heating bills

By DON OAKLEY

Not only has the high cost of housing placed home ownership out of reach for millions of Americans, but many people who already own homes are finding the cost of running them taking increasingly large chunks out of their household budgets.

Addressing a meeting of the National Association of Home Builders in Dallas the other day, Guy O. Mabry, vice president of Owens-Corning Fiberglass Corp., cited the case of a New Jersey homeowner whose annual fuel bills were almost as high as his mortgage payments and warned that "heating and cooling a house may soon become a luxury, unless the nation's builders take immediate steps to effectively reduce home energy consumption."

Mabry calls for a home energy efficiency rating system, similar to Detroit's miles-per-gallon designation, to help consumers. Just as m.p.g. has become the watchword of new car buyers, "e.p.m." (energy-per-month) costs are fast becoming the major concern of today's new home buyer, he says.

For starters, a doubling of current Federal Housing Administration minimum standards for insulation in attics, walls and floors "would have an immediate impact in lowering home energy consumption."

This, of course, would mean more business for the makers of insulation and less business for the energy utilities. But the latter are in little danger of running out of customers for all the energy they can provide in the foreseeable future.

There are also other energy-saving steps builders can take, such as double-paned windows, insulated doors with magnetic weatherstripping and tighter construction to reduce air infiltration. Nor need the low "e.p.m." house cost more, says Mabry. For instance, the use of 2-by-6 studs on 24-inch centers, instead of the traditional 2-by-4 studs on 16-inch centers would both accommodate thicker insulation and save significantly on lumber costs.

In addition, because of a more efficient "thermal envelope," heating, ventilating and air-conditioning equipment could be a much lower capacity.

There is a public as well as a private stake in the more efficient use of our energy resources.

Taxpayers are turning down bond issues. Schools are closed to community use during off-hours. Public buildings must close early. Not all of this is due to the cost of energy, to be sure, but energy is an important factor.

It will take ingenuity if money-short communities are to survive this era of scarce and expensive energy, and architects and builders are, in fact, developing new concepts in structural design, furnishing and maintenance to meet the challenge, as well as making more use of old ones.

The substitution of plastic plumbing pipe for metal can save a substantial amount of energy because plastics require only a fraction of the energy it takes to produce metal products.

The insulating properties of carpeting can save up to an eighth of heating fuel requirements. Substitution of fluorescent lights for incandescent bulbs cuts down on electrical consumption and lighting cost.

Building with exteriors of mirror glass can bring about a 44 per cent heat reduction. Heat-transfer systems are being designed coupling air-conditioning and heating units to pump warm or cold air from areas where it is not needed to those where it is.

Then there is the use of solar energy for heating and cooling, the possibilities of which we have scarcely begun to explore.

"You should have seen the one that got away!"

Transistor car soon?

Two factors keeping the electric automobile as little more than an experimental curiosity are the great weight of the huge banks of batteries required and their long recharging times.

That may be changing. Two Japanese companies claim to have developed a rapid-charge process for storage batteries that cuts recharging time to one-eighth of normal. The new technology involved the remodeling of conventional lead-acid batteries and battery chargers.

Batteries that usually take around four hours for each round of charging up to 80 per cent of their capacities can now be charged in 30 minutes, say Daihatsu Kogyo Co., a maker of industrial vehicles, and Yuasa Battery Co.

The greater efficiency of the batteries makes it possible to reduce the number of batteries. This permits more loading and, say the companies, promises easier starting and stopping of the electric motor and better acceleration.

One battery-powered pickup truck has been tried out for 15,000 kilometers of durability testing and was found to cover a distance of 60 kilometers, or about 37 miles, with each 30-minute charging.

This is still far short of the performance of the conventional internal combustion engine, but the electric car is getting there.

Daihatsu will shortly start marketing a new midsize commercial vehicle utilizing the new system.

Missile balance tips to Soviets

By RAY CROMLEY

WASHINGTON (NEA)—The signs are now clear. Leonid Brezhnev and associates in the Kremlin believe time is on their side in the strategic missile race.

They're happy with the present treaty, expiring late next year, which gives the USSR virtually a free hand to develop and build strategic missiles to the limits of its scientific and economic ability. And binds the United States, through unilateral "understandings" announced by Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, to very strict limits on what nuclear expansion this country can undertake.

With Soviet military-strategic research, now roughly double that of the U.S., the Russians could overtake and surpass us in critical areas within the next two decades.

Kissinger's failure in his Moscow mission to break the impasse in the strategic arms limitation talks is rooted in two major U.S. mistakes these past several years.

First, there was President Nixon's deep emotional desire for achieving a strategic arms limitation treaty in his time. This resulted in his ordering Kissinger to get Soviet agreement at virtually any cost. Kissinger obeyed. And Brezhnev's men got what they wanted. Terms the U.S. could not openly agree to were left so vague they could be interpreted in any manner Moscow chose.

Second, in the past half dozen or so years Congress has chopped heavily at research and development—frequently aided by administrations faced with Vietnam war costs, inflation and other financial problems. This, at a time, the Russians were increasing strategic military research as rapidly as they could expand scientific and technical staffs and research and testing facilities.

The Soviet tactic in each negotiation is to bind this country's development in areas where we are ahead and running away, but to hold the doors open where Soviet scientists see clear signs they can catch up or surpass this country's efforts.

Take anti-ballistic missile development, where American researchers were moving ahead with remarkable speed and the Russians apparently bogged down in interminable problems. The Soviet negotiators succeeding in pushing through an agreement tying us to a partially developed system both they and we know would be ineffective, worthwhile only as an intermediate experimental project, but worthless if confined to then-current technology.

Take too the current attempt to halt U.S. development of intermediate and long-range cruise missiles. Here the Russians may be somewhat ahead. But American technology is improving so rapidly the Soviet advantage is bound to disappear in short order.

In this cruise business, there's a military pig in the poke. Short-range cruise missiles—with longer ranges barred—give the Soviet Union a major advantage. Longer-range cruise missiles would bring back a balance.

Because 40 per cent of major U.S. targets lie along our coasts, Soviet submarines with short-range cruise missiles could hide in the nearby seas and, in war, destroy a considerable chunk of our industry and populations. By contrast, the Soviet Union is effectively an inland country; less than 2 per cent of the key military targets would be within the range of U.S. submarines armed with short-range cruise missiles.

Though its anti-missile defenses are almost worthless, the Soviet Union has developed a highly sophisticated air defense system. It would be difficult indeed for U.S. bombers to penetrate targets in any numbers without the assistance of long-range cruise missiles fired from without Russia's borders. Short-range cruise missiles would be of little value.

By contrast, the continental U.S. has so little in the way of air defense, Soviet bombers could penetrate at will. Short-range cruise missiles are adequate.

Constitution date more important than July 4?

Americans may be celebrating their Bicentennial 11 years too soon.

Important as was the Declaration of Independence, a second and more important American Revolution was the Constitutional Convention of 1787, according to Bower Aly, visiting professor at Kent State University.

"We won the war," says Aly, as quoted in an interview by the Ravenna, Ohio, Record-Courier. "and the country fell apart. A few men—like Madison, Hamilton, Jay and Adams—decided these former British colonies were in trouble.

"They were great men with the ability to look ahead. They had prescience. They recognized that the commonwealths would begin to struggle among themselves and that European nations would intervene on one side or the other, much as nations are doing now in Angola."

Thus they came together in Annapolis in 1787 to launch the Second American Revolution.

"Most people think of a revolution as a bloody, destructive thing," says Aly. "This instead was a bloodless revolution to build something."

The professor is right, of course. The war known as the American Revolution was but the prelude to what someone else has called "the American Evolution," the real beginning of which was the framing of the Constitution that has guided this nation since it was officially declared in March, 1789.

We should really celebrate two Bicentennials—this year the dramatic, watershed events of 1776 and, either 11 or 13 years from now, the equally momentous 200th anniversary of the Constitution.

Flaunting ignorance

The voice of the demonstrator is once again heard in the land, though it is but the faintest echo of what it was at the height of the Vietnam conflict.

While small contingents of demonstrators have picketed or paraded in various cities against U.S. involvement in Angola, there have been no demonstrations in front of the United Nations—which would probably do no good but which might possibly serve to remind that body which country is the real troublemaker in Africa.

As usual, of course, the Soviet Union remains immune from criticism by our native moralists.

Something called "The American Committee on Africa" has urged in newspaper advertisements that Americans "Act Now. Organize. Demonstrate. Tell Congress to cut off all funds for the Angolan intervention."

There once was a "Fair Play for Cuba" committee, organized by admirers of that great human liberator, Fidel Castro. There is today, however, no such thing as a "Fair Play for Angola Committee," despite the fact that some 10,000 Cuban troops, under Soviet auspices, are killing Angolans in Angola.

There are any number of reasons why Americans are not about to permit their country to become embroiled in Angola's civil war, and none of them has anything to do with the inane, outworn and pathetic chants of the demonstrators against American "imperialism."

The Angola protestors are not only whipping a dead horse but one that was never even alive.

By TOM TIEDE

WASHINGTON (NEA)—When Common Cause composed a code of presidential campaign standards some months ago, and asked all entries to swear allegiance, it received only one honest reply. Ron Cocome, manager of Gene McCarthy's independent candidacy, told Common Cause do-gooders to "take your standards and stuff them in your ear."

Calling the code "insulting," and adding, "I don't know who the blazes you think you are," Cocome thus became the only campaign officer of the season to say what many of the other think: that the post-Watergate penchant for morality in politics may be accelerating to the point where in the name of rectitude we are neglecting reason.

Cocome is worried that in so far as politics are concerned, "we are becoming a nation of super moralists." The growing attitude toward candidates high and low is that they are all crooks until proven otherwise. And the proof is becoming an ordeal of fire: Jimmy Carter prudently gave up even social drinking on the day he announced his presidential candidacy; at least one candidate has dragged his reluctant wife into his campaign for fear her absence would create rumors; glassy-eyed senators and congressmen haul out income tax, medical and even psychiatric records at every whistle stop.

Already the campaign has become the most puritanical of modern times, with Sargent Shriver boasting of his choir boy beginnings and other contenders quietly telling their staffs to, in effect, put the cards under the table when the reporters are about. And things may get worse. "Before it's over," says Cocome, "the Girl Scouts will want to know how many cookies we bought." If there's anything worse than forgetting sin, he sighs, it's remembering it too much; corrupt politics are one thing, pious politics another—count the silverware.

No doubt there is good reason for Americans to suspect that political candidates have private lives that are of interest, perhaps even of concern. John Kennedy aside, there was for example Vice President Richard Johnson of the Martin Van Buren administration. He enjoyed three black mistresses so much he talked of it and was therefore denied a re-election candidacy by will of public contempt. As for rumors, they are endless, even Adlai Stevenson was charged with being a homosexual (in the 1952 race) by a vengeful former wife.

And there seems no doubt that where applicable a politician's squalid side must be discovered, it almost never being voluntarily divulged. Even by the press. Especially not by friends. When the late Sen. Tom Dodd of Connecticut was accused of financial fraud in the 1960s, Sen. Russell Long (D-La.) is alleged to have said it for all his pals: "I'll support you all the way on this, Tom, even if you're guilty."

Yet who is to judge what is squalid and what not? John Ehrlichman, the sermonizing felon from Richard Nixon's staff, told the Senate Watergate probers that he had personally known "of incumbents who are not discharging their obligations to their constituencies because of their drinking habits," and went on to insist that questions of a candidate's "fitness, drinking habits . . . and morality and all" were legitimate matters for exposure. Under this criteria alone, "morality and all," perhaps no one in the real world would qualify for president.

Edward Kennedy has had Chapquiddick, to name just one morality bleep; Elliot Richardson has had some automobile accidents in which alcohol was a factor; Ronald Reagan paid no income tax in 1964; Hubert Humphrey has had many dreadfully shifty fund-raising habits; George Wallace forced his terminally ill wife to run as his proxy for governor of Alabama; even Barry Goldwater The Virtuous is said to have occasionally drunk too much during the 1964 campaign.

What in the end does it all prove? There are no statistics to support the contention that sobriety, chastity and thrift constitute leadership qualities. In fact, an argument can be made that great men have always been imperfect, very often even impure.

LaSalle man flies flags of different nations on porch

LASALLE, Ill. (AP) — As soon as Msgr. James F. Garrahan heard that an American won a medal in the Winter Olympic Games at Innsbruck he took down the Austrian flag on the porch of his home and unfurled Old Glory.

"I had displayed the Austrian flag when the Olympics started," said the retired 66-year-old clergyman.

He collects flags of countries he has visited and hangs them on his porch at the drop of an occasion.

"The other day we had a blizzard and I hung out the Canadian flag," said Msgr. Garrahan who has collected 16 standard-size flags and will add more as his travels expand.

Msgr. Garrahan remembers big flag-carrying parades he watched as a youth in Providence, R.I., and how his mother bought him one to wave.

"We had an American flag, of course, and also the Irish flag from the Garrahan's native Ireland," he said. "Back in those days Providence was populated by a wealth of French-Canadians, Irish, Sicilians and Polish. All had a strong sense of nationalism and had their own flags. It was a flag-waving city and I guess it got into my blood."

Msgr. Garrahan says he hung out the Portuguese flag when the Communists were making a push in Portugal. During Gen. Francisco Franco's illness and death, he unfurled the crimson and yellow Spanish flag.

Religious events are especially good flag days for him: Feast of Our Lady of Guadalupe (Mexican); Feast of St. Catherine of Sienna (Italian); and Feast of St. Ignatius Loyola (Spanish).

"During the planting season this spring I flew the Mexican flag in honor of migrant Mexican workers in the nearby fields," said Msgr. Garrahan, whose home is located on a busy U.S. highway. "Occasionally, a foreign visitor to our country will be driving by and see his flag on my porch," he said. "He will come in and ask why. I've met a lot of interesting people that way. I especially remember several hours I spent with an Irishman."

"I'm thinking of having a friend tape national anthems to go with my flags."

Woman leaves home to start new life

By VICTORIA GRAHAM
Associated Press Writer

"I wanted to walk out the door and march to the horizon and never stop."

"My kids were unhappy, my husband was unhappy and I was miserable. Who benefited? Why stay?"

Karen didn't stay. Two years ago she left her marriage of 26 years and her seven children. There had been boredom, drudgery, baby after baby. There was an alcoholic husband, a nervous breakdown, little money. There was no time for literature and the things she loved.

"I felt as though I was dying," recalls Karen, now 46 and a Richmond, Va., resident.

She moved in with a lover, went to graduate school, became a feminist — and deeply missed her 13-year-old son, Bobby.

After six uneasy months she moved back home, she and her college professor husband leading separate lives, sleeping in separate bedrooms. He called her "the star boarder," "the golden girl."

Life didn't get better.

She moved out again — this time for good — in May of 1974. Today she is an administrator with a small company, making $250 a week, sharing an apartment with another woman.

Karen, not her real name, is active in the National Organization for Women and organizes conferences for older women.

"We have to realize that we did what we did, did the best we could. Now we look ahead," she says.

"Leaving was the right thing to do. I should have left sooner," Karen says. "But I wrote half the script. Recrimination and resentment are acids that burn you up inside and don't do anyone any good."

Karen looks back on her marriage as being "one baby after another. I was scrubbing floors and running the house. I was barefoot and pregnant. There wasn't enough money."

"I put my husband through graduate school. I had been educated to higher expectations. Then he, an English professor, was doing what I wanted to do."

"I was in the harness and my mind was stagnant," recalls Karen, a strong, energetic, animated woman. She was a brilliant and precocious student, the first woman in her family to attend college. She earned a master's degree in English literature.

"I felt guilty because I wasn't happy in my marriage," she says. "I had beautiful children, a handsome professional husband and a house in the suburbs. I felt it was my fault."

"I would get depressed. My husband found me unsexy and uncommunicative. I wasn't easy to live with."

Karen first decided to leave her suburban marriage after she and her teen-age children took part in a psychodrama that left her "wrecked and bleeding inside."

They accused her of not being loving toward her husband, a brilliant, sometimes charming, sometimes helpless man. He himself once walked out briefly, saying he needed peace to write his dissertation. By the time Karen was 35, he was having a love affair with a 20-year-old woman.

Once she packed his bags and school books and papers and asked him to leave. He returned in the snow at Christmas time, tears in his eyes. She took him back.

In the psychodrama, Karen literally shrank into a fetal position.

"I felt such pain, and yet it was therapeutic," she says. "It made me ask basic questions about my life."

"Why all this sacrifice? What about the things I wanted: the literature, the art, the music, the travel?"

She sat down and listed all the worst and best things that could happen if she left, "and the good outweighed the bad."

Karen had been working in a computer firm, rising rapidly in a new field to earn $15,000 a year to put a daughter in a hospital and private school.

"I ran the house, I worked, I went to graduate school. My husband and I were strangers."

She walked into the kitchen one night as he was preparing a gourmet dinner.

"Why do you look so grim?" he asked.

"I have something important to say," Karen said.

"I want to leave."

"Is that a threat?"

"I mean it. I feel I am going under and I need a period of regeneration. I must get out."

She recalled that "he was rather pleased. He had his routine and a 10-year-old son and 15-year-old daughter at home to keep house. The older children were away.

"The only one who wasn't pleased was my little one," said Karen, a catch in her throat. "We were such pals."

"No, Mommy, I don't want you to go," Bobby cried.

"Sweetheart, I won't go far," she told him. "I'll call you every Wednesday night at 7 o'clock. I'll put in a special telephone and give the number only to you. On weekends we'll go horseback riding."

She said: "He had friends and a school, and I couldn't uproot him, for his own sake. I hoped he and his father would become closer. It's painful to me, but they have and my husband has bent over backwards with him."

Finally, she said: "I was the odd man out." Her love affair came apart.

Karen moved back home, holding a job, helping with the housework, but refusing to assume the household. "We slept in separate bedrooms," she said.

"I came to realize that I had married a man who was not the marrying kind."

"I had one foot in and one foot out the door. I asked if we could work something out."

They did.

Now Karen lives apart, missing her son, hoping, finding her own way.

Who needs ballyhoo when . . .
It's Gable and Lombard'

EDITH HEAD touch and aura of Hollywood's golden period make "Gable and Lombard" important fashion film. Here are the classic white flannel slacks, worn with navy silk crepe blouse and topped by navy cashmere coat.

By ELLIE GROSSMAN
NEW YORK (NEA) — At last! Gable and Lombard, together again!
Actually, it's James Brolin as Clark Gable and Jill Clayburgh as Carole Lombard in Universal Pictures' $4 million tribute, "Gable and Lombard," due for release in mid-February.
The promotion for the movie, according to one industry source, will be the maximum. Dell Books, for instance, is reissuing a paperback on Gable, Lombard, Powell and Harlow, with a new chapter on the making of the film.
But the ballyhoo isn't really necessary. Those with a fondness for Gable and Lombard, or for the '30s, or both, are standing in line now.
If she weren't the costume designer of the movie, Edith Head just might be one of them.
"I saw the film today," Miss Head says in a phone conversation from her California home, "and I like it because it recreates what I call the golden period."
In the three months in which she had to design the costumes — "It was a lot of time for us" — the eight-time Oscar winner

LUCKY ACTRESS Jill Clayburgh wears glamorous Edith Head designs reflecting use of luxury fabrics to dress film stars in the '30s. Stage and dressingroom one-shoulder gown is in crepeback stain.

Carole Lombard, she says, didn't have that problem. Or any other. "She had a superb figure. Then, you couldn't wear anything under your clothes, not even underwear, because everything was cut on the bias and fit very tightly. If you wore a girdle or a bra, the lines would show."
Lombard, she continues, was "cooperative and darling and had more fun with clothes than anyone. She'd put them on and whirl around the room. She had a flawless complexion and wore a lot of navy, black and pastels because she was a blonde, but never what I call poster colors — magenta, cerise."
Women dieted and exercised a great deal in the '30s, she recalls. "But Carole never had to diet because she was so active in sports. She went riding with Gable. She even took up fishing for him and no greater love hath any woman, don't you think?"
And, though Lombard did swear, "It was confined to people she knew and I don't think the filth attributed to her is true. But she liked to shock people occasionally."
When it comes to Gable, Miss Head is straightforward. "I

Jesus solves girls shyness problem

Dear Ann Landers: I really identified with that girl who wrote to say she was afraid to open her mouth in school, even when she was sure of the answer.
She said the sound of her own voice terrified her. You suggested that she read aloud to herself in front of a mirror every evening for two weeks and then force herself to speak out in the classroom.
I am not knocking your advice, Ann, because you are supposed to be an authority (or you check with someone who is), but I had the same problem and solved it a different way.
I decided to speak to Jesus—out loud—and ask for his help. He answered me and gave me the strength I needed to overcome my problem.
My mother says you will never print my letter because you are a non-believer and any talk of Jesus would offend you. I hope she is mistaken. We shall see.—Rose Petal

Dear Rose: Your mother is wrong on all counts. I am a "believer" even though you and I do not share the same beliefs. Talk of Jesus does not offend me or any other enlightened person of the Jewish faith. We believe Jesus was a great teacher, that he was a kind and gentle man, but we do not accept him as our Saviour. If Jesus helped you, I think it is wonderful. Go to Him whenever you feel the need. Help is where you find it.
Dear Ann Landers: I want to congratulate you for your strong stand on not visiting sick people in the hospital. A few readers got mad but more of us are with you than against you. I gave birth to four babies within six years. (One set of twins.) My relatives were very considerate, but my husband's family drove me crazy. I was a nervous wreck from all the company. My milk dried up and I couldn't nurse my babies. Finally my doctor put a big sign on the door: NO VISITORS. Do you think that stopped them? It didn't. My mother-in-law and her sisters came anyway. Finally I arranged with the floor nurse to come in when she saw my light on and ask everyone to leave except my husband.
Please keep on saying what you believe, Ann. Bless you.—First Hand Knowledge
Dear F.H.K.: Most hospitals these days sharply limit the number of visitors on the maternity floor, which is a splendid idea.
Any patient who does not want company should ask that

Bornemeier-Bolen exchange vows

POLO— Emmanuel United Methodist Church was the setting for the Jan. 10 wedding that united Miss Beverly Jean Bornemeier and Duane Lloyd Bolen in marriage. Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Bornemeier Sr., Polo, and Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Bolen, Oregon.
Officiating at the 2 p.m. ceremony was the Rev. Paul R. Olson, pastor at the church. Nuptial music was provided by Mrs. Craig McGuire, Polo.
Given in marriage by her father, the bride was attired in a gown of light-blue satin with a white lace shell, featuring an empire waist and accented with dark-blue ribbon. A headband of white roses secured her three-tired veil trimmed with lace. The gown and veil were made by the bride. She carried a nosegay that combined miniature carnations and baby's-breath with matching blue ribbon.

Play safe in rubber bridge

By Oswald & James Jacoby
Max Hardy of Los Angeles is both a top player and top teacher. His pupils play a lot of duplicate bridge and Max tries to show the difference between the play of the cards at rubber bridge and match-point duplicate.
He uses today's hand as a classic example. Whether South opens one club, one heart or the one notrump that Max teaches the final contract should be three notrump.
South wins the spade lead and looks at that nice six-card diamond suit in dummy. If he is a careless rubber bridge player, he starts to run high diamonds. East shows out on the second diamond lead. The careless player spends the next 10 minutes trying to salvage his contract and the next five complaining about bad luck.
The careful player ducks the first diamond. This would cost him a trick if the suit broke 3-2 but it would be the sort of trick rubber bridge players can afford to lose.
As for the match-point play-

Unaudited results indicate primary earnings of $2.28 per average common share, up from $2.10 per share in 1974. Net income advanced 9.8 per cent to $47,480,000 on operating revenues of $418,807,000. Fully diluted earnings were $2.20 and $2.04 per share for the respective years.

Fourth quarter primary earnings rose 9.8 per cent to 56 cents per average common share from 51 cents in the year-earlier period. Net income was $11,643,000, up 10.1 per cent. The company noted that 1974 results have been restated to reflect its acquisition of Mid-Texas Communications Systems, Inc., in December.

Noting "moderately stronger" demand in the fourth quarter, Robert P. Reuss, president and chief executive officer, said new telephones in service rose 5.9 per cent for the year to 1.37 million phones. Long distance message volumes grew 8.0 per cent in 1975, and were up 10.2 per cent in the final quarter.

Electric power and natural gas sales were affected by mild November-December weather, Reuss added, although both utility operations registered revenue gains. For the full year, electric kilowatt-hour sales increased a strong 10.9 per cent. Gas unit sales, down 5.1 per cent, continue to be impacted by curtailment in deliveries to interruptible customers.

Expanding on a previous announcement, Reuss said CTU is deferring plans to sell common equity in light of the proposed sale of its gas operations to Minnesota Gas Company.

Short- and long-term borrowing in 1976 would also be reduced. Though operating at profitable and efficient levels, Reuss said the gas operations will require substantial capital commitments to develop supplemental gas supplies for future demand. Even with higher capital spending, Reuss said, unit sales are forecast to continue declining because of higher curtailment of large volume users.

Minnesota Gas has significant supplemental gas capabilities, Reuss added, and "we believe they will be in a strong position to ensure continuity of service to our customers."

3 retire from Kable

MT. MORRIS — Three longtime employees of Kable Printing Company — William H. Grantham, Leonard Eykamp, and Lois L. Barnhart — retired in recent weeks.

All three began their Kable careers during the "growing period" of the 1920s and 1930s and their labors and dedication helped immensely as the company moved into a prominent position in the publications and catalog printing industry.

Bill Grantham, Rt. 1, Mt. Morris, has more than 41 years of service upon his retirement, which was effective Nov. 1. He was an assistant in the Letterpress Department.

It was in January of 1934 that Grantham started as a nigger at Kable. Later, he was a helper in the Rotary Pressroom. His printing career was interrupted by World War II service in the U.S. Navy. He has been active in the Mt. Morris VFW and American Legion and served in numerous offices, including that of commander of VFW

Lois Barnhart had two periods of work at Kable. She was in the old Mailing List Department from 1929 to 1941, leaving to raise her family. In January of 1954, Lois returned to the Mailing List Department. She became secretary to the manufacturing superintendent in 1956 and from September 1974 until her retirement at the end of 1975 she was Bindery office secretary.

She and her husband, Fay, will continue to reside at Rt. 2, Polo.

In boring NCIC basketball game

Ottawa defeats Dixon 69-52

By MIKE CUNIFF
Telegraph Sports Editor

The Dixon High School pom-pom squad presented a halftime show with a "flashlight routine" that drew thunderous applause Friday night, but the Dixon Dukes varsity basketball team's performance was more likened to snoring and boring than exciting in a 69-52 loss.

Ottawa's Pirates provided the Dukes' opposition and the visitors were in complete command of the game played at Lancaster Gymnasium. Ottawa buzzed away from two early leadlocks to double Dixon's point total in the first quarter.

"Buzzed" is the correct synonym, as the Pirates surged into the lead behind the shooting of 5'9" junior guard Buzz Strickland, who canned three baskets in the first quarter and another pair in the second frame.

Six of Eight

Strickland was six of eight in the second half to finish the contest with 11 buckets in 17 attempts, most from long range. The Pirates balanced Strickland's pinpoint bombing with the precise inside moves of 6'5" senior forward Mike Purcell and 6'7" sophomore center Craig McCormick.

Purcell pushed through 11 points, all in the opening 16 minutes, while McCormick, limited to four markers at half, canned five baskets in as many field goal attempts the final two quarters to end with 16 points.

McCormick also rejected a quintet of Dixon shots, thwarting Randy Donegan three times in the first period, Dave Zinnen at the end of the third quarter, plus John Ortgiesen in the final frame. The five blocked shots kept the Dukes from shooting 50 per cent for the game.

Ottawa, on the other hand, sank 30 baskets in 48 attempts for a blazing 63 per cent. Strickland was 11 of 17, Purcell 5 of 11, McCormick 7 of 10 and Kevin Duggan four of six.

The Pirates began with eight hoops in 14 shots in the first quarter, to assume a 16-8 advantage. Purcell dumped in the opening two buckets (one an offensive rebound). Strickland got three baskets in the frame on a 20-footer, a fast-break lay-up after a long clear-out pass from McCormick, plus a jumper from the key with :03 left.

Duggan added a 20-footer, while McCormick tacked on a pair of turn-around jump shots. John Kemp pushed in three baskets, while Ortgiesen made two free throws for the Dukes' offense.

Two More Points

The Pirates added two more points to their bulge with a 17-15 advantage in the second quarter. Purcell had three buckets (four shots), Strickland and Kurt Duggan a pair each. Purcell got the final trio of baskets in the period, one on a driving layup in which he slammed into Ortgiesen for a charging foul.

Ortgiesen threw in all three of his field goal attempts and both charity tosses he attempted in the eight minutes. Guy Price added a trio of free throws, while Kemp and Greg Weigle added two points each.

McCormick was flawless in three shots, Strickland four of five and Kevin Duggan two of three in the third period. Strickland missed his first effort and then canned four consecutive hoops. McCormick twice converted feeds from Purcell for short-range baskets.

Two Baskets Each

Kemp, Doug Hipple and Zinnen each tossed in two buckets apiece, while Donegan added one for the Dukes. Kemp and Zinnen collected an offensive rebound basket each. Dixon attempted 15 shots and made seven in the period.

McCormick picked up a three-point package to boost Ottawa's lead to 54-37 to open the fourth quarter. Strickland added two baskets, both on driving efforts, to his final total of 11. Kevin Cassidy and Keith Kimes got in late to hoop two free throws and a basket, respectively.

Hipple zeroed in three baskets and a free throw, while Kemp dropped in six points for most of the Dixon offensive attack. Ortgiesen fed reserve Eric Lohse for the final Dukes points, via a basket with 1:31 to go.

"Did-Not-Rebound"

Dick Franklin, Dixon head varsity basketball coach, stated, "We just did not rebound offensively at all. We had trouble moving the ball against their zone and we did not attack the basket at all. Now this is behind us, we just have to look forward to next week."

Kemp paced the Dukes with 18 points based on nine baskets (15 attempts). Hipple, scoreless in the first half, sank five buckets and a charity toss in the final 16 minutes.

Double Figures

Ortgiesen also reached double figures with three baskets and four free throws. Kemp had three offensive and five defensive rebounds, Ortgiesen four and five, while Donegan collected five and seven, respectively, before fouling out.

FOUR ARMS are not better than two when you try to shoot a basketball. Dixon's Greg Weigle (12) found this axiom to be true Friday night in an NCIC game against Ottawa as the Pirates' Kevin Duggan committed a foul on this play in the second quarter. Weigle sank two free throws after the infraction. (Telegraph Photo)

Hipple handed off five assists while Zinnen notched six. Kemp, Ortgiesen and Weigle got three each. Dixon drops to 5-3 in the NCIC and 8-10 overall with the loss. The Dukes are idle tonight and then go to La Salle-Peru next Friday.

Ohio loses 69-55

TISKILWA — John Smucker fired in 21 points, Bob Prusator 19 and Ken Fisher 17 as the Tiskilwa Indians dealt the Ohio Bulldogs a 69-55 Little Eight Conference loss Friday night.

Tiskilwa was behind 31-27 at half before Ohio collected only 24 points in the second 16 minutes. "It was a really good game the first half," commented Dave Mead, Ohio coach. "Both teams were aggressive both on offense and defense."

The Bulldogs held a slim 18-17 lead after one stanza behind eight points by Jim Brandau and seven from Keith Yucus. Tom Yucus dumped in eight markers in the second quarter for Ohio.

Smucker canned 11 points in the opening quarter while Prusator added a perfect seven-of-seven from the charity stripe throughout the contest.

Tiskilwa and Ohio are now both 4-1 in the Little Eight. The Bulldogs are 14-4 overall and now host Paw Paw in a non-conference game tonight.

Brandau paced the Ohio rebounders with 11 grabs while Tom Yucus and Keith Yucus added seven apiece. Duane Blaine and Brandau dished out four assists each while Dan Piper contributed three. Brandau was the only Bulldogs player in double figures with 19 points.

Clippers crush Savanna 93-50

AMBOY — The Amboy Clippers hit 59 per cent from the field and placed four players in double figures to crush the Savanna Indians 93-50, here, Friday night in a Three Rivers Conference basketball game.

Steve Powers started the Clippers off with 10 points in the opening quarter when Amboy assumed a 21-11 lead. The Clippers added to their advantage in every stanza. Gary Croegaert, Amboy head varsity coach, stated, "I thought Steve Powers had a real good offensive game while Randy Blackburn had four excellent passes which led to baskets."

"Brian Dempsey added seven assists in a good all-around floor game. We handled the ball as well as we have all year and only had five turnovers," Croegaert added. "Bothe (Joe) was tough inside. He had 14 rebounds and 20 points."

"Everyone played well. Despite the fact Savanna is a poor team. It is not who you play but how you play. I thought we passed the ball exceptionally well. Any time you score 93 points and have only five turnovers, you know you passed well."

"It was our weakness earlier in the year but we seem to be settling down now." The win upped Amboy's Three Rivers ledger to 8-3 and the Clippers season slate to 15-6. Amboy has now won seven games in succession.

"Ever since our weekend against Fulton and Morrison after the first of the year. And guess who we have next weekend? It will be our biggest week going into the Regional." The Clippers now travel to Fulton next Friday and then host Morrison Saturday.

Amboy finished with 42 baskets in 71 attempts. Powers tallied 21 points to pace the Clippers while Bothe added 20, Blackburn 15 and Greg Esgar 10. Todd Parker dumped in 21 markers for Savanna, now 0-11 and 2-17.

Mt. Morris slips by Oregon

By JIM FOX
Telegraph Sports Writer

MT. MORRIS — A bitter rivalry seems to bring out the supreme performance of the two teams competing. Even when the records are as contrasting as the Oregon Hawks' and the Mt. Morris Mounders' are, it simply makes no difference when they actually appear on the same court to do battle.

The Mounders just slipped by Oregon 70-61, here, Friday evening as four Mt. Morris players scored in the double figures column. The Mid-Northern conference win ups the Mounders to 8-3, 14-5 overall, while Oregon falls to 1-10 and 2-15 overall.

The Mounders came out roaring in the first quarter racking up 24 markers to Oregon's 15. Rich Masters popped in 10 points in the high-scoring period while Ron Alden picked up eight. Mt. Morris demonstrated aggressive offense and utilized the press in pester the visiting Hawks.

Oregon used a 20-footer from junior forward Dave Bocker to counter an offensive rebound tip-in by Alden to knot the score early in the going. The 2-2 deadlock was the only mark in the game the Hawks were within striking distance until the fourth quarter.

Alden hit on a turn-around jumper at 6:52 followed by an easy fast break lay-up from the hands of Jeff Condit, a Masters short shot and a Mike Turner 20-footer as the Mounders surged to a 10-2 lead at 6:07. The Hawks broke the scoring spree when senior Mike Kump connected on a lay-up at 5:55.

Alden and Masters continued to dominate the first quarter as the hot duo pushed in the next 12 of 14 markers. Ken Diehl sandwiched a bucket in between the consistent scoring of Alden and Masters. In the final five minutes of the first quarter of action Masters sank eight markers while Alden pushed in four.

Bocker netted six points in the period while Kump added five as the Hawks played catch-up. Oregon stayed pretty close considering the deadly accuracy of the Mt. Morris shots.

Senior Hawk guard Scott Lewison took command in the second period as Oregon tried to come closer. Alden pumped two more baskets home as the hosts enlarged its lead.

Oregon missed some easy lay-ups that did not brighten head coach Duane Piller and combined with the Mounders consistent scoring it did not look too well for the visitors.

But at 4:20 remaining in the half Lewison got hot. A pair of free throws slightly cut a 14-point margin. Lewison then connected on a lay-up and a short shot in a one-minute span to pull Oregon within eight at 32-24.

The Mounders received a big break on the next play as the Hawks came up with a key steal by Lewison but senior guard Dave Satterfield missed the lay-up turning the momentum the other way. Diehl hit a bucket after the missed bunny and the hosts lead sailed back to 10 points.

Lewison potted a 10-foot jumper at 1:44 as the guard continued to display the hot hand. Lewison accounted for 10 of the Hawks 28 half-time points. Alden pushed through 12 to lead his Mounders while Masters added 10 for a powerful one-two punch.

The third quarter was an even shooting performance from the two teams. Kump paced the Hawks with six markers in the period while Lewison put in five, working towards his game high scoring mark of 23 points.

Mt. Morris used the balanced scoring of Bruce Hongsermeier and Masters, who each dropped in four points in keeping a lead of 12 markers throughout the quarter. At the end of three periods the Mounders controlled the game 54-43.

But with these two rivals anything could be expected to happen in the final eight minutes. Oregon made a run at it as the Hawks pulled within seven points twice in the fourth period but could not get over the hump in order to catch the Mounders.

Hongsermeier collected six points in the last quarter that was a key in the game. The guard hit in key situations to break Oregon scoring streaks and take away the visitors momentum.

At 5:35 the Hawks pulled within seven at 56-49 on a Kump 15-footer. The big basket was proceeded by a pair of Lewison charity tosses. Seconds later Hongsermeier connected on a 20-footer to boost Mt. Morris back up by nine.

Bocker hit two free throws at 4:39 as Oregon found itself down by the small margin of 60-53. The long buckets by the accurate shooting Mounders kept pushing the hosts back up and Oregon just could not keep coming back.

"I have to give our kids a lot of credit," commented Piller after the game. "This was one of our best games of the year. Mt. Morris came out burning and really hurt us in the first half. I think they hit on 18 of 37 shots. It's tough to beat that kind of shooting."

"A key in the game was the offensive rebounds. Mt. Morris controlled this area of the game. But our kids played a real fine game. They played the best they could play."

"The kids worked well together tonight," stated Mounders coach Larry Stevens after the tilt. "I was especially happy the way they moved the ball inside against the Oregon zone."

"Masters and Alden did an excellent job inside, especially in the first half. We did not go inside the second half all that much. We could not move the ball that well in the second half; we got a little over confident after our first half performance."

Behind Lewison's 23 markers for Oregon was Kump with 15 and Bocker with 13. Hongsermeier, Masters and Alden each netted 16 while Diehl added 10 for Mt. Morris. Oregon travels to Winnebago tonight while Mt. Morris moves on to Forrester in Mid-Northern conference games.

Young gets bronze

INNSBRUCK (AP) — Speed skater Sheila Young, on a collision course with history, missed her prime target but still came away with a bronze medal today to wind up a sparkling Olympic career that ranks with the best in American history.

No other American has ever won three medals in one Winter Olympics.

Having gained the attention of the sports world, the former waitress from Detroit was attempting a unique triple play in the 12th Winter Games today. First there was a silver medal in the 1,500-meter race, then a gold in the 500, and today she was seeking immortality with the pursuit of a second Winter Games gold medal.

Had she flashed across the finish line with the fastest time today, Miss Young, the 25-year-old speed skating sensation from the frozen ponds of Michigan, would have placed herself in the company of only two other Americans who have won double gold medals at a Winter Olympics.

And, with a silver medal added to her bounty, Miss Young's achievement would have surpassed John Shea and Irving Jaffee, who both won two gold medals when the United States swept the men's speed skating events in 1932.

But in the end, it was not to be as Miss Young failed in what she calls her best event, the 1,000 meters, losing to both Russia's Tatiana Averina and Leah Poulos of Northbrook, Ill.

"I'd rather have one gold than four silvers," Miss Young said.

Miss Young said that she would compete in the World Skating Championships later this year and then retire and marry her fiancé, James Ochowitz of Milwaukee, an Olympic cyclist.

Racing in her third event in three days, Miss Young said, "my legs didn't feel good."

There was a false start in her race but she said that did not distract her: "Sometimes they help relieve the tension," she said. "But my start was not very good."

"You don't just press a computer button and have Sheila win the race even though you folks might want it to be that way," said her coach, Peter Schotting.

Miss Young won the silver medal in the 1,500 meters on Thursday and the gold medal in the 500 meters Friday.

In 1932, John Shea and Irving Jaffee each won two gold medals as the United States swept the men's speed skating events.

Seven Olympians have won three titles in one Olympics beginning with Thorleif Haug of Norway in the Nordic skiing events in 1924. It was another 32 years before the next triple winner, Austria's Anton Sailer in Alpine skiing. In 1964, Russians Lydia Skoblikova won thinsfirst in all three Alpine skiing events.

In 1972, Galina Kulakova of the Soviet Union was the queen of the Games with three gold medals in Nordic skiing and Dutchman Ard Schenk was king with three speed skating titles.

The multi-talented Miss Young, the 1973 world champion cyclist, comes from an athletic family. Her mother was the United States' national cycling champion in 1943 and her father was a state cycling champion.

Clair Young, who is here watching his daughter climb the ladder of Olympic greatness, gave Sheila skates 23 years ago then pushed her when three straight failures at making the world sprint team almost cracked the ice under his budding star.

Number of jobless in Illinois up

CHICAGO (AP) — While the unemployment rate dropped last month nationwide, it worsened in Illinois, the latest Labor Department figures show.

Statewide, 9.4 per cent of the work force was unable to find jobs in January, compared to 9.0 per cent in December.

Nationally, the rate improved from 8.3 to 7.8 per cent. A spokeswoman for the state Labor Department said Friday that government analysts have no explanation for the worsening employment situation in Illinois.

The 9.4 per cent figure put Illinois back where it was in November and compares with a 6.4 per cent unemployment rate a year ago.

Throughout the state, the Labor Department counted 472,800 persons willing and able to work who couldn't find jobs. In December those out of work totaled 453,800.

Peoria, Rockford, Springfield and Bloomington-Normal reported sizeable increases in their unemployment rates.

In Chicago, the rate improved from 10.1 per cent in December to 9.9 in January. Other areas where there were fewer unemployed include the Illinois section of the St. Louis area, from 10.2 per cent to 9.4 and Decatur, from 10.6 to 9.9.

Unemployment jumped in Bloomington-Normal from 3.7 per cent to 5.6; in Springfield from 5.4 to 7.2; in Rockford from 10.1 to 11.8 and in Peoria from 4.5 to 5.6.

LARRY NICKLAUS

Variety of special activities at Sauk Valley Arts Festival

A ventriloquism show, a belly dancing performance and a martial arts demonstration will be among the many special activities featured at the Third Annual Festival of the Arts and Crafts at Sauk Valley College. The festival will run from Friday, through Sunday.

Mrs. Milly Cole, festival coordinator, said all three of these special events will feature the talents of local area residents.

The ventriloquism act will be presented by Larry Nicklaus, a Dixon school teacher, along with his faithful wooden friend, Danny Merchant. Nicklaus is scheduled for both afternoon and evening shows on Saturday and Sunday in the gym at the college.

He is a member of the North American Association of Ventriloquists and is presently awaiting word of his acceptance into the Fellowship of Christian Magicians.

Performances in classical belly dancing will be presented on each day of the three-day festival by Lynn Ulve, a Sterling resident and belly dancing teacher in Sauk Valley's community services program.

Ms. Ulve, whose performance will include part of the entertainment at the Miss Sauk Valley Pageant judging Saturday afternoon, is also teaching belly dancing this year at the La Salle YMCA. In addition to her instruction, she is taking additional training in Chicago.

MIKE BUCHER

Thirteen-year-old Mike Bucher will be presenting a demonstration of the martial art of Tae Kwan Do at 1 p.m. on Saturday. Mike, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Darwin Bucher, Rock Falls, began the study of Tae Kwan Do at the age of 10. Since then he has studied locally as well as at the Kang W. Min School in Syracuse, N.Y. He is one of the youngest in the state to hold a first degree Black Belt in his sport.

The arts festival, which is sponsored by the non-profit Sauk Area Arts Council, is designed to promote the arts and crafts in the Sauk Valley College area. Further information about the festival may be obtained by contacting Mrs. Cole at 626-4416.

Jobless woman wins $100,000

CHICAGO (AP) — A 54-year-old woman who has been unemployed for almost a year has won $100,000 in the Illinois State Lottery.

Lillian Strzalka of Wheeling won the top prize Friday night in the lottery's weekly Super Shot Game.

Clarence J. Harper of Dittmer, Mo., was the $25,000 second-prize winner. He did not attend the drawing.

Miss Strzalka said she can use the money because since she lost her job as a factory worker, "I just sit home and collect compensation."

Asked what she plans to do with her money, Miss Strzalka said, "I'm going to take everybody out to dinner at MacDonald's."

She also said she wants to take her 85-year-old mother on a vacation to Alaska or California.

Narhi Arnold of Galva and Barbara C. Janicki and Tillie Jankowski, both of Chicago, each won $2,500.

ROCHELLE — Only six building permits, totaling $9,100, were issued for the month of January in Rochelle, according to Mayor Bill Cipolla.

Paper says Howlett asked for scrap iron legislation

CHICAGO (AP) — Illinois Secretary of State Michael J. Howlett requested introduction in the General Assembly of a second bill affecting the scrap-metal industry, Chicago newspapers reported today.

The bill, House Bill 2220, would have exempted scrap-iron processors from keeping identification records on junked auto hulks, the Chicago Sun-Times says. The measure rejected by the Senate last spring is similar to HB 2825, which would have removed scrap processors from the state motor vehicle code.

Howlett is paid $15,000 a year as vice president and consultant of Sun Steel Co. of Chicago Heights, which in turn is owned by M.S. Kaplan Co., Chicago, one of the country's largest scrap iron dealers.

The Sun-Times quotes the sponsor of HB 2220, House Majority Leader Gerald W. Shea, as telling the House Motor Vehicles Committee last spring that the bill "was put in at the request of the secretary of state."

The newspaper said Howlett aides passed word to legislative staffers in a subsequent memorandum that Howlett was backing the second bill.

The Chicago Daily News had reported Friday that William

Dart, then an aide to Howlett, had authored the second bill and passed it along to Springfield.

Dart is now deputy corporate counsel for the City of Chicago. He could not be reached for comment.

An spokesman for Howlett commented Friday that, if an aide drafted the bill, the secretary "was not aware of that fact and it was done without his authorization."

Howlett, who has announced that he will resign his position with Sun Steel next week, has maintained he took no position on such legislation.

The group will also be selling candy bars in the near future to support our annual Spring Banquet in May.

Karen Pinter, SVC faculty member and WIG Advisor, said social and literary significance of writers like Emily Dickinson, Louisa May Alcott (author of Little Women), Willa Cather, Kate Chopin, and Denise Levertov is analyzed in the sound and slide presentation.

The presentation also traces woman's place in the field of art from their philosophical exclusion through the point at which they supposedly entered the main stream. The works of such artists as Kate Greenway, Mary Cassatt, Marisol and Lee Krassner are included.

SVC's Women's Interest Group has scheduled these viewings for the month of February in order to provide information of interest to men and women in the SVC area. The presentation for the week of February 16th focuses on rape. All residents of the community are encouraged to attend any or all of these sessions.

Secretary of State Michael J. Howlett rings the Liberty Bell replica currently touring Illinois. The bell will be in Lee County on Monday and Tuesday, Feb. 16 and 17.

Liberty Bell replica to tour Lee County schools

SPRINGFIELD — Illinois' replica of the historic Liberty Bell will tour the Lee County schools on Feb. 16 and 17, Secretary of State Michael J. Howlett announced today.

The bell will be displayed Monday from 8 a.m. to 12 noon at Jefferson School in Dixon, and 1 to 3:30 p.m. at Madison School in Dixon. On Tuesday it will appear from 8 to 10:50 a.m. at Amboy High School; 11:30 a.m. to 1:15 p.m. at Franklin Center High School in Franklin Grove, and 2 to 3:30 p.m. at Paw Paw High School.

"During this Bicentennial year, the bell is being displayed at schools, libraries, shopping centers and other public facilities in all areas of the state," Howlett said.

"It is our goal that as many people as possible have the opportunity to view close up this cherished symbol of America's commitment to the principles of liberty and justice for all."

"Standing before the replica of the bell, which announced the signing of the Declaration of Independence 200 years ago, should inspire all of us to reaffirm our commitment to those principles."

Everyone observing the bell during its statewide tour is being invited to sign his or her name on a sheet of paper.

The names and other memorabilia will be placed in a time capsule, which will be buried beneath the Liberty Bell when it is permanently mounted on the Capitol grounds in Springfield at the conclusion of the tour.

The capsule will be reopened on the 300th birthday of the United States in 2076.

Fifty-three reproductions of the original bell were cast in France and distributed by the Treasury Department to each of the states and territories in 1950. They served as inspirational symbols in a campaign to sell United States Savings Bonds.

Mounted on trucks painted red, white and blue, the bells toured the nation to promote fiscal independence. Each state was permitted to keep its bell after the tour.

For almost 25 years, the Illinois reproduction lay abandoned at the state fairgrounds. Howlett located the bell and put it on the road to commemorate America's 200th anniversary.

The replica conforms in tone and size, and bears the same inscription, as the original relic in Philadelphia. Its famous crack, however, is only painted on.

Bicentennial patrol cars

Captain Dave L. Pearson, District 1 commander, state police, at Sterling, announced today that the state police have placed four specially marked patrol cars into service in connection with the 1776-1976 Bicentennial year. The cars are white and trimmed with red and blue striping. In an attempt to bring a higher level of visibility to their patrol vehicles in traffic, the state police are changing the base color of their vehicles from beige to white with dark accent stripes. Captain Pearson commented that with the change in base color to white it was possible to create the red, white and blue patriotic design without additional cost. The four specially marked patrol vehicles, being assigned in different areas of Illinois, will be rotated through each state police district for maximum exposure. They will be used by different troopers in the patrol operation and are available on a request basis throughout 1976 for any activities in connection with the Bicentennial Celebration.

The Worry Clinic

By DR. GEORGE W. CRANE
CASE F-496: Edith T., aged 27, is a sixth grade teacher.

"Edith," I inquired, "how do you like your new clergyman by this time?"

For Edith was a devout attendant at a fundamental Bible church, whose dynamic former pastor moved elsewhere.

Another clergyman had now been occupying the pulpit for six Sundays, so I wondered how Edith reacted to the new minister.

"Well, Dr. Crane," she replied, meditatively, "I think he is a good speaker though not as dynamic as our former pastor."

"But one of the things I don't like about him is what happens after he pronounces the benediction."

"Our former preacher always went back to the rear of the sanctuary to shake hands with all the parishioners as they departed."

"But our new minister simply stands down front at the chancel and expects the people to come forward to shake hands."

"Many strangers, as well as timid teen-agers, will not go forward to greet the pastor, so they miss that cordial handshake the former clergyman gave everybody."

"Besides, our new clergyman is not very good at remembering names and faces."

"And that fact is more evident, I suppose, because our former preacher was remarkable in greeting people by their names."

"Even if a strange couple attended church this Sunday, by the following Sabbath, the other pastor would greet them by name when he shook their hands as they left the sanctuary."

"And this friendly handshake causes strangers to feel welcome and more quickly establishes a friendly feeling that they 'belong,' don't you think?"

"Besides, even the timid teen-agers and other shy home folks relish being greeted by name and asked to come back next Sunday."

A basic axiom of political psychology states that no publicity for a candidate wins him more votes than to personally greet and shake hands with his constituents!

Clergymen need to adopt that same rule and consciously cultivate their memory for names and faces.

That's why I have urged the importance of mentioning a minimum of three parishioners every week in the Sunday sermon, for these folks then become more fervid rooters for the preacher!

And also increase their contributions on the church collection plate!

Preachers who haven't learned how to make an interesting speech, can often get by via their handshaking and diligent pastoral calling.

Ideally, however, a stellar preacher should hold the rapt attention of his congregation because of his dramatic, narrative sermons.

Expositional and haranguing sermons empty the pews!

Narration is what keeps parishioners awake on Sunday morning!

Some scholarly clergymen try to read one new book each week and fill their sermons with polysyllabic exposition, but although their audiences may then boast about the many doctoral degrees held by such a preacher, they then stay home or visit other churches where the narrative orators hold the congregations spellbound via Christ's parable sermonizing.

Jesus was a narrative preacher, using stories (parables) about everyday events and naming people in his audience!

So send for the booklet "Public Platform Strategy," enclosing a long stamped, return envelope, plus 25 cents.

Dr. Says: Shingles and pox not linked

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.
DEAR DR. LAMB — I am writing about shingles. I had them and at that time I wrote to Dr. Joseph Molner; he was writing in our newspaper like you are.

My problem is your information is different from his. You say you can't catch shingles from a person with chicken pox. Dr. Molner says, take care to stay away from youngsters with chicken pox, a week or two of being careful is a small price to pay if you can avoid shingles.

You say if you have an attack of shingles and recover you are not immune. Dr. Molner says an attack does produce immunity against a second attack.

Could you please clear this up for me? I know there is a gap of several years between the two opinions, but I need to know as my daughter-in-law just broke out with shingles.

DEAR READER — Yes, there probably has been a few years between the accounts. I can't speak for the late Dr. Molner, but I can say that the statements you attribute to me are the thinking of modern virologists who are authorities in the field.

Dr. Richard Johnson of Johns Hopkins Medical Center writes in the latest edition of the textbook of medicine (Beeson and McDermott 1975) "zoster (shingles) rarely develops after exposure to chicken pox or other cases of zoster." Later in his discussion, he points out that the very rare person who gets zoster on exposure to chicken pox or other cases of shingles is the one whose immune mechanism is shot, for example, because of destruction of the immune system in the course of treatment of leukemia. By contrast, a person without immunity can get chicken pox after exposure to a patient with shingles.

Dr. Johnson notes in this same discussion "There is a popular misconception that herpes zoster (shingles) does not recur. However, zoster does not give immunity to further attacks, and the likelihood of a second attack is about the same as, if not slightly greater than, that of having suffered the first."

Perhaps the account you read contributed to the widespread mistaken idea that an attack of shingles confers immunity. In any case it isn't so. It is quite possible for you to have another attack of shingles.

Time marches on and with it our knowledge constantly increases. When knowledge increases, changes can and do occur.

DEAR DR. LAMB — For many years, once in a while, a spray of saliva comes out of my mouth. Could you tell me what this is?

DEAR READER — It is saliva. The salivary glands store some saliva and they have a duct or opening in the mouth.

When one of these glands is squeezed by pressure, as in opening the mouth or other muscular movements, stored saliva will squirt out just as if you squeezed on a bulb syringe or the bulb on a spray device. The spraying has no medical significance.
